

Junior Data Analyst Job Market Analysis

Job-posting skill, hiring, work-mode and experience analysis • Page 1 • 5 visualizations

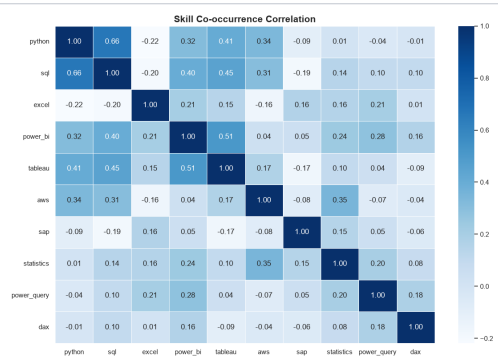

1. Most Demanded Skills for Junior Data Analyst Jobs

Excel leads demand at 64%, followed by SQL at 40% and Python at 36%, showing the strongest core-skill requirements.

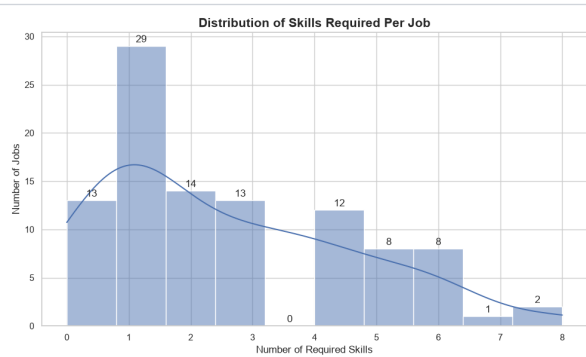

2. Skill Demand Across Job Postings

The demand pattern confirms that Excel, SQL and Python are the most frequently requested skills in this sample.

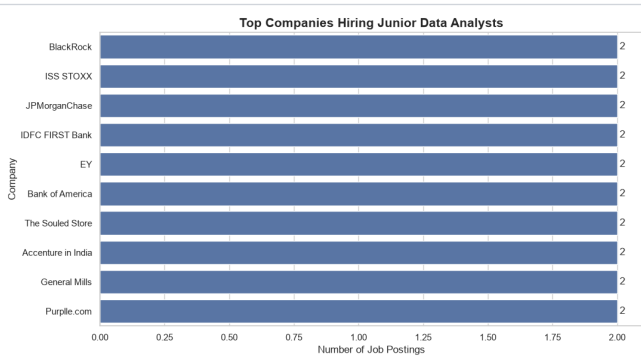

3. Skill Co-occurrence Correlation

Python and SQL show the strongest relationship, while Power BI and Tableau also have a notable positive co-occurrence.

4. Distribution of Skills Required Per Job

Most postings require 1–3 skills, indicating that junior roles often focus on a compact set of practical tools.

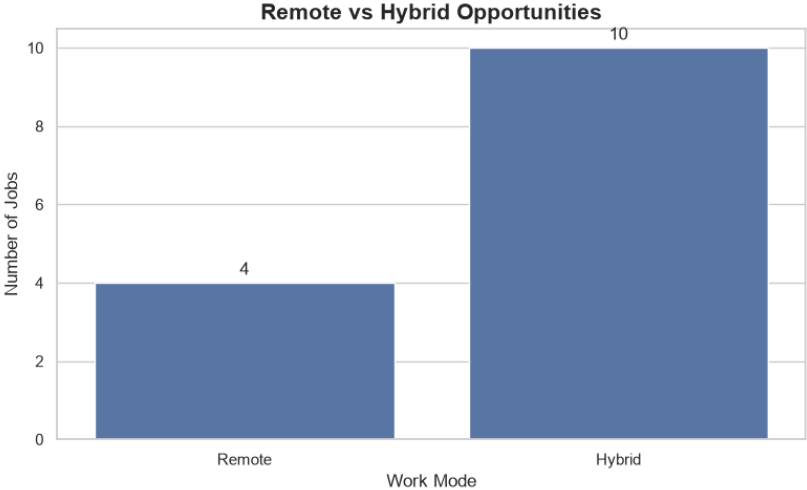

5. Top Companies Hiring Junior Data Analysts

Hiring is distributed across several companies, with the highest observed count being two postings per company in this sample.

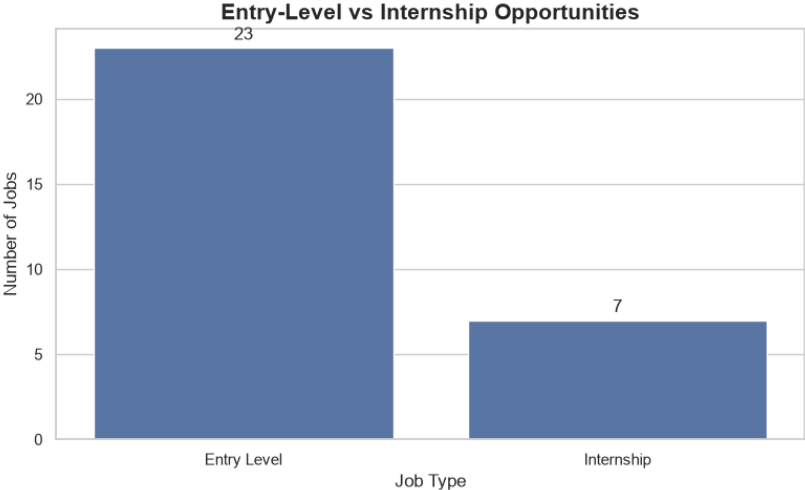

Junior Data Analyst Job Market Analysis

Job-posting skill, hiring, work-mode and experience analysis • Page 2 • 4 visualizations

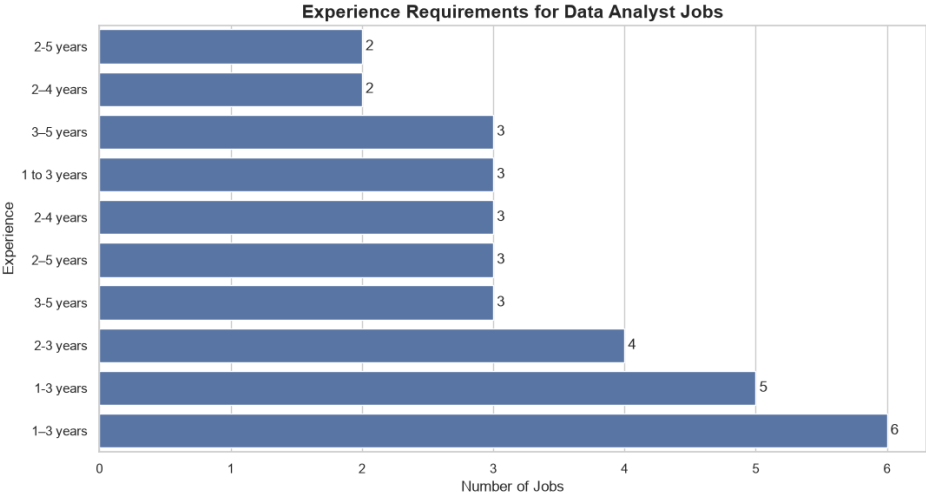

6. Remote vs Hybrid Opportunities

Hybrid roles outnumber remote roles 10 to 4, indicating stronger on-site collaboration requirements in this dataset.

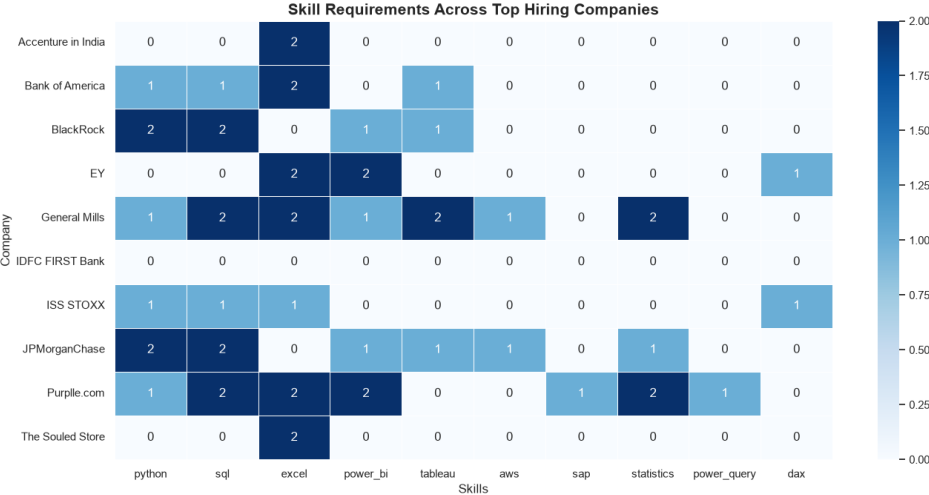

7. Entry-Level vs Internship Opportunities

Entry-level positions (23) are substantially more common than internships (7), suggesting more direct junior-role opportunities.

8. Experience Requirements for Data Analyst Jobs

Experience requirements are mixed, but 1–3 years appears frequently, showing that some 'junior' roles still expect prior experience.

9. Skill Requirements Across Top Hiring Companies

Company requirements vary, but Excel, SQL, Python and Power BI appear repeatedly across the leading employers in the sample.